

We need specializations for the pickling classes because we have to treat MapDef related objects separately probably... (still have to make up my mind)

These static methos should actually be implemented as free methods that act as ad-hoc constructors...

These relations abuse the UML notation to imply that an state is a sub-state of another.

